NUBA

{ Where silence becomes a destination }

Hidden deep within Egypt's Western Desert, Siwa Oasis reveals an ancient world finally opening its doors to the modern traveler.

There are places where time feels suspended. Siwa is one of them — a vast desert sanctuary of salt lakes, sacred springs and Berber traditions untouched for centuries. Here, golden dunes melt into emerald pools, and nights unfold under constellations so bright they seem close enough to touch.

With the opening of Siwa's first true luxury retreat, travelers can now explore this mythical oasis in ways once impossible.

From wandering the ruins of the Oracle of Amun — where Alexander the Great sought his divine destiny — to floating on crystalline salt lakes or sharing tea with local artisans who keep ancestral traditions alive, Siwa offers a kind of wonder that can't be replicated.

For over 30 years, NUBA has crafted journeys to the world's most remote corners, unlocking experiences defined by authenticity, access and awe.

NUBA. For those who seek what few will ever find.

What is it that drives someone to greatness? To take on the unknown, venture into the unseen, and dare all? This is the spirit that gave birth to TUDOR, a spirit carried forward by every individual who wears this watch. This is the spirit that drives Nic von Rupp. On his wrist is the TUDOR Pelagos, a 42mm-diameter titanium diving watch with a ceramic bezel insert and a helium escape valve. A tool tried the world over, that is built to take on the waves of Nazaré. Some are born to follow. Others are born to dare.

Quality, a family tradition since 1911

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Let's Stroll!

HAPPY NEW YEAR, DOMINION FAMILY!

As we step into 2026, I want to begin with two simple words: thank you. Every month, you invite us into your homes, your stories, your wins, your challenges, and your celebrations. That trust is something I never take lightly. It's what makes this publication so much more than pages and photographs—it's a living snapshot of an extraordinary community.

One of the things I love most about The Dominion is that this neighborhood isn't built only on beautiful homes—it's built on people, relationships, and shared moments. In a world moving faster than ever, where most news feeds are filled with noise, this magazine stands out because it is created by our residents for our residents. It's personal. It's relational. It's meaningful.

Every picture of your kids, every story of a neighbor's achievement, every event recap—these remind me why I do what I do. When families take the time to share their lives, it shows just how connected this community really is. And as the publisher, my goal remains the same as the day I started: to strengthen community, celebrate families, and add value to your life each month.

January always feels like a reset. A fresh canvas. A chance to step forward with renewed clarity and purpose. And as we head into this new year, I'm excited to bring you even more of what makes Stroll Dominion special—authentic stories, elevated content, spotlights on the incredible people who live here, and opportunities to connect face-to-face at our private neighborhood events.

I also want to acknowledge our business partners—the ones you see throughout these pages. Their support allows this publication to remain completely free to our residents, and more importantly, they genuinely care about serving our community with excellence. Many of these businesses have built long-term relationships with Dominion families, and their commitment mirrors what our neighborhood stands for: trust, quality, and connection.

As we move into 2026, here's my encouragement for all of us:

Slow down enough to notice the good. Make time for what matters most. Lean into relationships. And keep building the kind of community where people feel seen, known, and valued.

It's an honor to continue telling your stories and helping make The Dominion feel even more like home.

If we haven't met yet, I hope we do soon. I'm at most of our events, around the neighborhood often, and always just an email or text away. This publication exists for you—so if you have ideas, stories, photos, or features you'd love to see this year, please reach out. I'd love to include your family in an upcoming issue.

Here's to a great year ahead—filled with purpose, connection, and more of the moments that matter.

Grateful to serve you,

Jason Smith

POET'S PEN

When you're abandoned and feel all alone,
Cut off from the world, and now on your own.
It's an empty feeling, with nothing to show,
Living inside your head, nobody can know.

Once loved for so long, but now that is gone,
Perhaps making moves, you know that are wrong.
Your mind is a-mix, of regret and remorse,
You'd do things better, you know that, of course.

There's love in your heart, but where to begin,
To break the ice, and start over again.
Words flow from your heart, and then up through your mouth,
That life-giving cadence, it's what it's about.

More time passes by; you can't let that occur,
Love can grow weak, and become just a blur.
So pick up yourself, and shake off the dust,
You can do better, and you bet you must!

Plan (far) ahead to help parents cover the costs of long-term care

TOM MARCONI, FIA SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT FROST

We all want the best for our parents as they age, but many families find themselves unprepared for the financial realities of senior health care. The costs can be significant, and without careful planning, they can deplete even a well-built investment portfolio. Planning proactively will help protect your parents' financial resources — and your own — while ensuring they receive the high-quality care they deserve.

START THE CONVERSATION EARLY

The best time to begin is long before your parents' health declines. Start by asking them about their own desires and expectations for future care, and what financial preparations they've already made. Be sure to involve siblings in the discussion so the whole family is aligned and potential misunderstandings are avoided later on.

ASSEMBLE KEY LEGAL DOCUMENTS

Encourage your parents to establish financial and medical powers of attorney, which authorize a trusted person to make decisions if they become incapacitated. They should also have a living will or advance health care directive, documenting their preferences for medical treatment.

RESEARCH LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE SOONER RATHER THAN LATER

One of the most daunting potential expenses for seniors is the cost of an extended stay in a nursing home or assisted living facility. The cost can reach six figures annually, and Medicare offers limited coverage beyond 90 days. Long-term care (LTC) insurance is the best way to guard against these costs, and the premiums may even be tax deductible. However, timing is critical as premiums rise quickly with age, and approval becomes more difficult after 65 or once health issues emerge.

CONSIDER OTHER FUNDING OPTIONS

Beyond traditional LTC insurance, there are alternative ways to cover long-term care:

- Hybrid life insurance or annuities: Some life insurance policies offer an LTC rider, allowing partial benefits to be used for care expenses. Similarly, some annuities (purchased with a lump sum in exchange for guaranteed income) can increase their payout if long-term care is needed.
- Self-funding: If you're in a financial position to cover your parents' health care costs directly, doing so does offer advantages such as freedom from insurance restrictions, and no "unused" premiums if long-term care isn't needed.

IN PRACTICE, THE BEST STRATEGY MAY BE A COMBINATION OF THESE CHOICES.

As with any complex financial issue, working with experienced professionals can make all the difference. Through a comprehensive and proactive approach, the wealth advisors at Frost can bring together the right team to ensure your long-term care strategy fits seamlessly within your broader picture, helping preserve your family's security and your parents' comfort and dignity in the years ahead. Contact Tom Marconi at 210.220.6414 or TMarconi@frostinsurance.com

Life In Rome

It Is Probably Better Now

BY DAN JOHNSTON, DOMINION RESIDENT

This month at the meeting of The Dominion History Club we will conclude a three-part series on the Roman Empire. Included in the discussions have been the people who made Rome the greatest empire to its time, the great battles and the great rivalries, and the legacies of architecture, literature, engineering, government, and history that made the empire remarkable. Behind the scenes of grandeur and greatness are the people and aspects of life that are also worthy of investigation.

Here are a few items of interest about life in Rome.

- The family was dominated by the father, an arrangement referred to as “paterfamilias”. By this arrangement, the father could decide to punish, kill, or sell any member of the family. The father made the decision to keep or abandon a baby born to the family. If kept, the baby was welcomed with a ceremony on its tenth day. If abandoned, the baby was placed in an urn at a temple to either perish or be claimed by another family. Families with more than three children were rewarded.
- Boys were married by age 16, girls starting at age 14.
- A girl’s name came from her father (i.e., Claudia, daughter of Claudius) or from her order of birth among the female siblings (i.e., Secundia, the second daughter, or Tertia, the third daughter).
- Boys went to school, learning oratory and gentlemanly skills. Girls took lessons at home, although some did attend primary school.
- Men still single at 25 and women still single at 20 were fined.
- Men were not allowed to show affection in public. One senator lost his seat because he embraced his wife in public.
- Wives were not allowed to drink in public or “appear to be very smart”.
- Acting was considered so low an occupation that if Romans became actors, they had to give up their Roman citizenship; consequently, most actors in Rome were Greek slaves.
- The goose was considered to be sacred in Rome because the central citadel of Rome was saved from an attack by Gauls in 400 B.C. because of a warning offered by a flock of geese startled by the approaching enemy.
- Public latrines were common in Roman cities, with multiple holes for relief and sponges handy for wiping.
- Roman numerals are an expression of counting with one’s fingers.
- Roman religion was polytheistic, based on the same gods that were worshipped by the Greeks (albeit with different names). One of the most interesting features of this religious structure was the Vestal virgin. Similar in lifestyle to nuns of modern times, they guarded an eternal flame in the temple of Vesta that symbolically protected the well-being of Roman homes. Originally, they were the daughters of the rulers of Rome, but later they were the daughters from leading noble families. It was considered an honor for a family to have a daughter in service to Vesta. Chosen for training between the ages of six and ten, the girls began a term of service that lasted for 30 years (ten years to learn their duties, ten years to perform their duties, and ten years to train new girls). They were sworn to chastity. If chastity were lost, the punishment was to be buried alive, a fate that is reported to have happened to at least twelve of the maidens.

- Insanity was a medical issue in Rome, especially noted as an affliction among some of the more notorious rulers (Caligula and Nero being the most famous). It is believed that a probable cause for this affliction was the water provided to Rome. The aqueducts that transported the water to Rome from neighboring mountains were lined with lead, and the erosion of this lining by the passing water contributed a toxic aspect to the water supply of the city.

And a closing historical thought: “Rome never fell. It just turned into an immortal idea.”
 Join us on 8 January to witness the fall of the Roman empire. History is fun!

Colonel Dan Johnston was a career Army officer of 25 years service and a combat veteran of the Vietnam War. Following retirement from the service, he taught World History to high school sophomores for 15 years. He and his wife of over 50 years, Pam, are blessed with four children and ten grandchildren.
